Names from the Qur'ān

The prophets' names and the names the Qur'ān mentions, 164 in all: each with its Arabic, a short meaning, and where it is found in the Qur'ān.

Reading the list. Verses are given as sūrah:āyah, so 19:16 is Sūrat Maryam, verse 16. The line under each name is a short summary; where the scholars differ on a name's origin, it says so. A few names carry a scholarly note about giving them as names: read it on the name's page before you choose.

The full entry for any name, with its meaning quoted from the source, the people who carried it and every verse, is at firstadhan.com/names/.

Where this comes from

The Arabic of each name is copied from its source and never retyped: for 155 of these 164 names, from the Qur'ān's own text (the Uthmānī script, through alquran.cloud); for the rest, from the book each name's page cites. It is shown in its citation form, without the case ending a verse may give it.

Meanings come from the classical works cited on each name's page, chiefly Ibn Manẓūr's Lisān al-'Arab and al-Suyūṭī's al-Itqān fī 'Ulūm al-Qur'ān. The short lines here are our plain-English summaries of those entries; for a prophet's name without a sourced meaning, the line names the prophet instead. Where the sources differ, or do not say, so does the list.

Names checked against their sources up to October 9, 2026. This list was made on October 10, 2026 from the same data as the website; the website is always the most current.
